

Congratulations on your new arrival!

If you have not already notified your insurance company (including Medicaid) of your new family member, it is necessary that you do so now. Insurance providers allow 30 days for enrollment of a new baby. New family members not enrolled within 30 days, may be subject to a long waiting period or limited insurance coverage. Your baby's insurance coverage is determined by your employer's health benefit plan. We encourage you to contact your company's benefit manager or call the insurance company directly to enroll your new baby. Be sure to tell your insurance provider to start the coverage on the baby's date of birth. You will also need to update your Coordination of Benefits (COB) at this time.

If you have secondary insurance coverage, you will need to contact both insurance companies and update Coordination of Benefits.

While you are enrolling your new baby, it is a good time to ask about Well-Baby Coverage, Office Visit Coverage, Immunization Coverage and Co-pays.
